

Nepal Rastra Bank A Brief Technical Note on

Consumer Price Index (Base Year 2023/24)

1. BACKGROUND

Inflation is a major macroeconomic indicator that is usually measured by the percentage change in the Consumer Price Index (CPI). The CPI is calculated based on the average price of a fixed basket of goods and services that are commonly consumed by households over a specific period, usually a year. Nepal Rastra Bank (NRB) has been compiling and publishing the CPI data for five decades. This note gives a brief overview of the methodology, coverage, basket, and weight of the recent update of the base year, which is now 2023/24.

The CPI base year is regularly updated to reflect changes in households' consumption and expenditure patterns. The major objectives of the current update include revising baskets for price collection, assigning weights to the selected items in the basket, expanding geographical coverage, and improving the methodology for computing the index and collecting prices. NRB has been regularly rebasing the CPI through the periodic Household Budget Surveys (HBS). However, for the first time, the current basket, weights, and base year are updated using the results from the Nepal Living Standard Survey (NLSS) conducted by the National Statistics Office (NSO), Government of Nepal, in 2022/23. The updated index is a significant improvement in terms of methodology following the international good practices as mentioned in the CPI Manual: Concepts and Methods, 2020<sup>i</sup> and the UN classification of Individual Consumption according to Purpose (COICOP), 2018 Guideline.

Further, the index is more representative in terms of economic activities with urban and rural coverage, and geographical distribution of the markets. A salient feature of the current CPI is the computation of provincial-level indices in urban and rural areas covering all 77 districts. Retail market prices are collected for 525 items.

2. METHODOLOGY

2.1 WEIGHT

The commodity basket and weights are derived from the NLSS-IV, conducted by the NSO from July 2022 to June 2023. The survey contained detailed information of household expenditure and consumption of food and beverages, and non-food and services from a nationally representative sample of 9,600 households across 15 analytical domains or strata (seven provinces with rural and urban areas and Kathmandu valley). The survey incorporated the methodology of international best practices, reflecting the administrative demarcation of the province and local levels as per the Constitution of Nepal, 2015.<sup>ii</sup>

The weights of the Consumer Price Index (CPI) represent the proportions of household expenditure and consumption for the year 2022/23. The weights given to each product in the CPI indicate its relative importance in the overall index. Items with lower weights have a smaller influence on the CPI than those with higher weights.

Household consumption is estimated as

- i) sum of expenditure by households on goods and services for consumption,
- ii) value of goods produced at home (excluding services), and
- iii) goods received in kind and consumed by the households. Own-produced goods and received in kind are included in household consumption with imputed value at prevailing market prices.

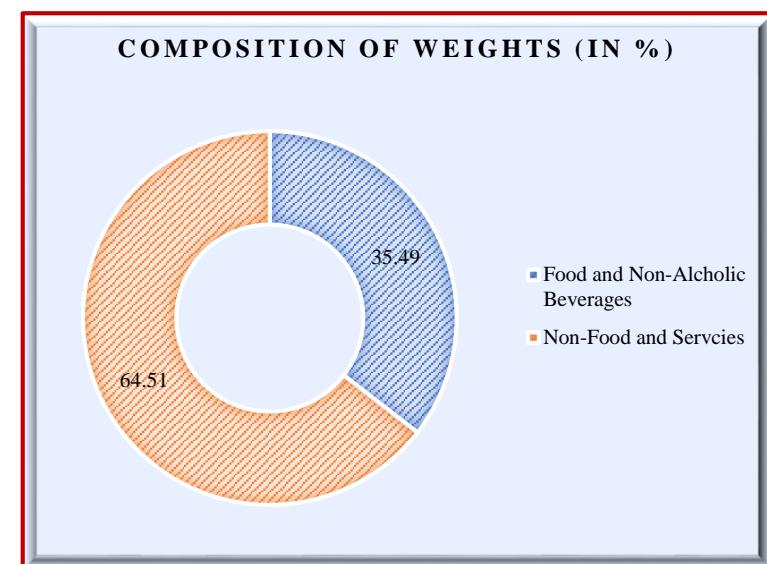

The food expenses have been calculated from section 5(a) of the NLSS-IV questionnaire where the food and food away from home expenses are annualized using 7 day consumption data of households. The non-food expenditures are calculated based on the annual consumption data from section 6(a) of the NLSS-IV questionnaire.

House rent includes both actual rents and imputed rents. For owner-occupied houses, when the amount for estimated rent was not reported, the hedonic regression method was applied to impute rent. The consumption of durable goods, defined as items used repeatedly for at least a year were estimated using the median depreciation, derived from section 6(c) of the NLSS questionnaire. The share of own production non-food goods consumed by households has been calculated from section 6(d) of the NLSS-IV questionnaire. The reported annual values were used for utilities such as electricity, telecommunications, sewage water supply, which represent significant expenditures.

The consumption expenditures have been aggregated using a multi-stage stratified sampling methodology. Weights are distributed geographically based on average consumption expenditure and the number of households in each domain. Explicit weights are assigned for 249 goods and services mentioned in the NLSS-IV questionnaire. For the remaining items grouped under 'other' or 'group' categories, implicit weights were assigned by the number of price quotations based on the retail survey on sales of those items.

2.2 CPI BASKET

The CPI is calculated using a fixed-weight basket method. The list of items in the CPI basket was finalized using a cut-off sampling method that captures 97% of the total consumption of households and it covers at least 95 percent of consumption expenditure in each domain.

Prices of items included in commodity basket are collected on weekly, monthly, and quarterly basis depending upon the perishability and the likelihood changes in price of items (Table 1). However, the quarterly items are further divided into three groups, and their prices are collected monthly in a staggered manner based on possible price revision of those items. For weekly items, prices are averaged for the month. The detail list of commodity basket, items and respective weights are presented in Annex 1.

2.3 MAIN GROUPS AND COMMODITY WEIGHT

The national level CPI index will be published under two broad groups: Food and Beverage and Non-Food and Services with 10 and 13 sub-groups, respectively. However, the provincial-level indices will be published in two broad categories, along with the urban and rural areas. Further, for Kathmandu valley which includes three districts Kathmandu, Lalitpur and Bhaktapur, separate indices are calculated for two broader groups. Alcoholic drinks, tobacco products, and restaurant and hotel groups have been placed in the non-food and services group, which were previously under food and beverage group.

Table 2 shows the weight of major groups and sub-groups of the current and previous CPI. The weight of food and beverages group has slightly increased to 45.79 if we include three sub-groups that were under food and beverage group earlier.

2.4 MARKET CENTERS

Market centers were expanded based on the population distribution from the 2021 Census and the number of industry establishments from the NSO, National Economic Census 2018 to ensure adequate sample size for provincial-level indices<sup>iii</sup>. The key coverage includes:

- i) 87 market centers covering all 77 districts, up from 60 market centers and 50 districts in the previous series (Table 3).
- ii) Representation of both rural and urban market centers in all provinces, with three rural markets selected per province based on population and establishment data. This results in 21 rural markets and 66 urban markets.

Table 3: Number of Markets for Price Collection

The list of markets for price collection for new and old CPI are in Annex 2 (A) and 2(B).

2.5 PRICE COLLECTION

Price data is collected regularly from designated market centres on weekly, monthly and quarterly basis. Two enumerators are assigned for price collection, verification and reporting in each markets. Various mechanisms are in place to ensure quality and accuracy of data. The group mean imputation method is used for seasonal and temporarily missing data. The review mechanism has been developed to regularly monitor the market activities and address the issues such as emergence of new products and disappearance of existing items. Further, a centralized price collection mechanism has been implemented for 28 items such as data packages, phone calls, laptops, airfare in the current system.

The data quality management is a key aspect of true representation of general level of price. The price data quality is ensured through a double verification system with two enumerators in each market. Enumerators act as data collectors and verifiers on an alternative basis. The CPI System software automatically indicates the price collector to write notes about the causes, if there is significant changes in price in the particular market. The reported prices are further verified by the Price Division, Economic Research Department of NRB to avoid possible errors in reported price data. Capacity development and awareness trainings for enumerators are conducted regularly, along with the interaction program with data providers. Online-based validation meetings are conducted on a regular basis.

2.6 FORMULA AND INDEX CALCULATION

The methodology involves the international best practices followed by Consumer Price Index Manual: Concepts and Method 2020 for the choice of formula, weight distribution, and price collection procedures.<sup>iv</sup> The Consumer Price Index (CPI) is calculated in two stages: (i) elementary indexes are calculated for prices of individual items within each markets, then (ii) higher-level (aggregate) indexes are calculated. The geometric mean (Jevons formula) is used at the elementary level, while modified Arithmetic Laspeyres index is applied to aggregate the CPI at the higher (weighted) level.

The elementary index for  $i = 1, 2, \dots, 249$  commodities is defined as the unweighted geometric mean of the price relatives for the two periods 0 and t;

$$I_j^{0;t} = \prod \left( \frac{P_i^t}{P_i^0} \right)^{\frac{1}{n}} \dots \dots (i)$$

Where, n = number of price quotation of items.

$I_j^{0;t}$  = Geometric mean of price relative from the base period 0 to the current period t for commodity i;

$P_i^t$  = the price of the individual items which belongs to commodity i at time t;

$P_i^0$  = the price of the same commodity i in base period 0, which is FY 2023-24.

Higher level index is calculated by using a modified Laspeyres formula which can be written according to following algebraic expression,  $I^{0;t} = \sum W_i^b \cdot I_j^{0;t} \dots \dots (ii) [\because \text{from (i)}]$

Where,  $W_i^b = \frac{p_i^b \cdot q_i^b}{\sum P_i^b \cdot q_i^b}$  and  $\sum W_i^b = 1$  is the expenditure shares for the commodity i in the weight reference period b.

$p_i^b$  and  $q_i^b$  respectively denotes the price and quantity of  $i^{\text{th}}$  commodity in the weight reference period b, which is FY 2022-23.

Monthly indices are calculated independently for each market center and then aggregated to the provincial and national level for sub-groups, groups, and an overall general index.

3. KEY FEATURES OF NEW SERIES

The new CPI has several improvements including a broader coverage, revised weightage methodology and a more flexible review process. The changes aim to provide more accurate and relevant measure of inflation in Nepal. The comparative features of the two CPI series have been presented as follows.

4. DATA DISSEMINATION AND RESULTS

NRB disseminates CPI data in its monthly Current Macro-economic and Financial Situation report. This includes national, provincial (with rural and urban) and ecological belt specific CPI indices. The index measures the average general price of CPI basket compared to the base year. Inflation is calculated on year-on-year (Y-o-Y) percentage changes, comparing the current month to the same month of the previous year. Month-over-Month (M-o-M) changes are also reported, which is the change in the current month compared to the previous month of the same year.
